The “starving artist” label doesn’t apply to the community of creatives—painters, sculptors, caricaturists, graffiti artists—who call Wynwood home. For starters, the rent is exorbitant these days. Plus, it’s downright improbable to go hungry in a neighborhood responsible for some of the city’s top restaurants (not to mention Miami’s best bars and best coffee shops). Wynwood restaurants—which account for a slew of the top new restaurants in Miami—have transformed the city’s dining scene. Within a several blocks radius you’ll find bread baked on the spot, dine on house-made sausages and knock back some very intricate cocktails involving all sorts of infusions. So if it’s your appetite rather than your artistic pursuits leading you to this hood, head to these top 10 Wynwood restaurants to quell your cravings.

Joey’s

A pioneer of the Wynwood Arts District culinary scene, Joey’s boasts a vast menu of classic (and affordable) Italian dishes. But it’s the thin-crust pizza that keeps diners coming back—it was named as one of the country’s best by Food & Wine Magazine. The inventive menu includes the Dolce e Piccante (fig, gorgonzola, honey and hot peppers) and the signature Joey (tuna in olive oil with spicy salami, gorgonzola, capers and spinach). There’s live music to accompany your gorging every Thursday evening and happy hour specials on Fridays.
